When Tenants Claimed the City Jun 22 2020 In postwar America, not everyone wanted to move out of the city and into the suburbs. For decades before World War II, New York's tenants had organized to secure renters' rights. After the war, tenant activists raised the stakes by challenging the newly-dominant ideal of homeownership in racially segregated suburbs. They insisted that renters as well as owners had rights to stable, well-maintained homes, and they proposed that racially diverse urban communities held a right to remain in place--a right that outweighed owners' rights to raise rents, redevelop properties, or exclude tenants of color. Further, the activists asserted that women could participate fully in the political arenas where these matters were decided. Grounded in archival research and oral history, When Tenants Claimed the City: The Struggle for Citizenship in New York City Housing shows that New York City's tenant movement made a significant claim to citizenship rights that came to accrue, both ideologically and legally, to homeownership in postwar America. Roberta Gold emphasizes the centrality of housing to the racial and class reorganization of the city after the war; the prominent role of women within the tenant movement; and their fostering of a concept of "community rights" grounded in their experience of living together in heterogeneous urban neighborhoods.

Tenants Rights Jan 18 2020 Do you live live in a building that has violations? Want to form a Tenants Associations and organize and have your landlord removed from active management of his or her own building, have the City become involved, bring the building up to code compliance and purchase the building as a low income co-op? This book will show you how. Landlords think they can manage properties over 400 miles away from where they live. It can't be done. Landlords need to be there to manage the property so the rent can get paid and repairs can be made. Why aren't tenants paying rent? It's because you're not here to collect it and the apartment needs work and you're not fixing it. Why do property management companies charge $150 to change a light bulb? Tenants have rights too and deserve a decent place to live. This book will show you how to get results legally and within your rights.
